

WILLIAMS-IN-CHINA TEACHING FELLOWSHIPS

Hong Kong

Since the 1960's, Williams has sent graduates to teach and study at the Chinese University of Hong Kong (CUHK), one of the top universities in this dynamic city of approximately 6 million people. The current fellowship holders are Alexa Valenzuela '09, and Gigi Campo '10.

The fellowship is a one year position, with a possibility of a second year, if the candidate and the University so desire. The work begins in late August. Teaching duties are divided between United College, where Fellows lead their own class in English Conversation, and one of several departments, where Fellows act as Teaching Assistants in a regular course. Williams pays $7000, divided in June and January installments. CUHK adds approximately HK$ 10,000 in monthly salary and a campus apartment that you share with the other Williams person and, possibly, another US fellow. Fellows can, at no additional expense, take Chinese language courses at CUHK, which are encouraged but not required. Fellows are responsible for their own health insurance.

Application

Fill out this application and return it, together with a brief statement of purpose, your transcript and a resume, to Professor Cecilia Chang, Hollander Hall 353, by February 28th.

Name: _____ SU Box: _____ Email: _____

Major(s): _____ Language(s): _____

Please list two faculty who know you well. No written recommendation is necessary.

Briefly explain on a separate piece of paper why you are applying and how this program fits into your long-range plans

For more information, contact Cecilia Chang, cchang@williams.edu